KHOSLA KA GHOSLA! 2

Gemini

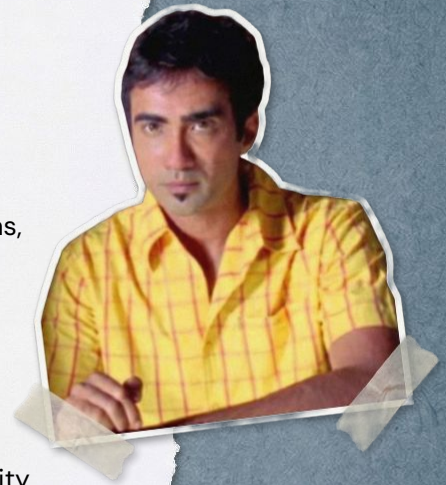

A Film That Became Cultural Memory

Khosla Ka Ghosla didn't succeed because of scale or spectacle.

It stayed because it captured something deeply familiar: the quiet ambition of the Indian middle class, the frustration of broken systems, and the satisfaction of finally outsmarting them.

Over time, it moved beyond being just a film. It became reference material.

Quoted in conversations, clipped into memes, and revisited across generations, it holds a rare space where storytelling meets lived reality.

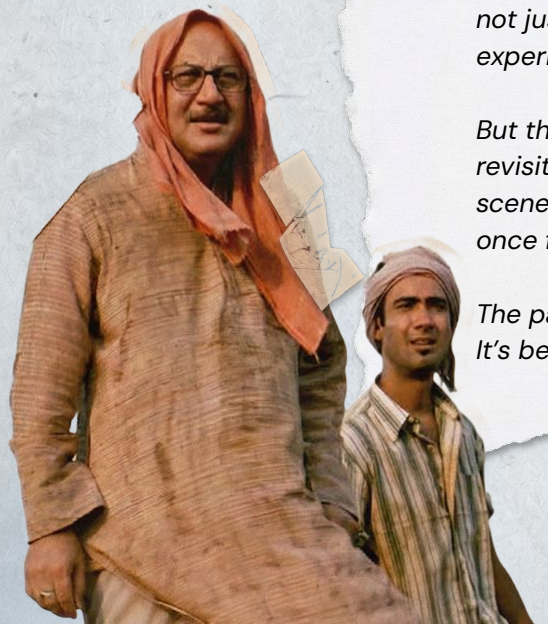

Gemini

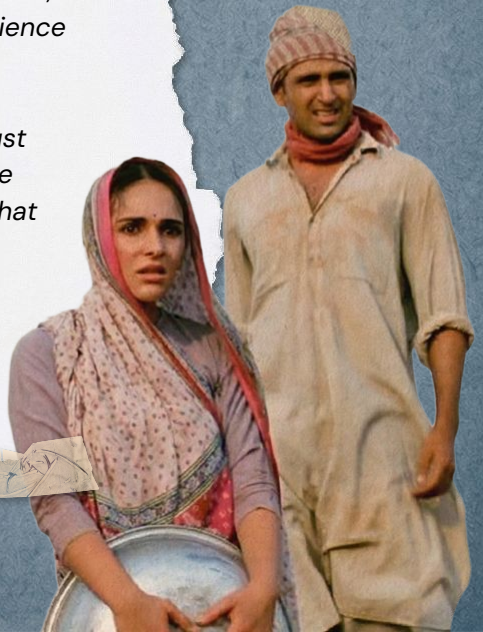

Why Nostalgia Is Peaking Right Now

Across Indian pop culture, there is a clear return to the familiar. Classic films are being re-released, rediscovered, and reinterpreted, not just by those who grew up with them, but by a younger audience experiencing them for the first time.

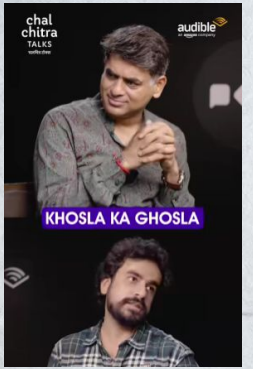

But this nostalgia is no longer passive. Audiences today don't just revisit old stories, they actively engage with them. They recreate scenes, remix moments, and insert themselves into narratives that once felt distant.

The past isn't just being remembered.
It's being re-lived in a more participatory way.

KHOSLA KA GHOSLA

Khosla Ka Ghosla will always be one of our underrated favourites.
@iamshom

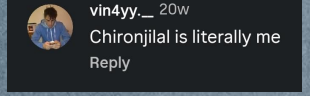

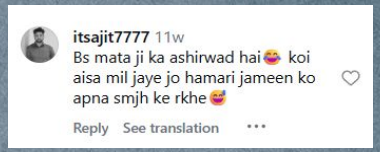

And people often mistakenly tend to take them for just "characters"
When in reality, they're an extension of the society we live in and feel so real that we develop a diff kind of familiarity, a diff kind of bond with them..
a bond/familiarity that we usually develop with people we actually meet in real life.

At its core, Khosla Ka Ghosla was never just about land or conflict.
It was about that defining moment when people stop reacting and start thinking differently, when they find a smarter way to turn the situation in their favour.
That same shift now plays out in everyday life.
The need to navigate complexity, make better decisions, and stay one step ahead remains constant.
Which is where the story evolves.
Which leads us to
Our approach for this campaign:

Plot mein twist hai.

Gemini

Official Movie Poster

Concept:

The official movie poster is where a film announces itself, setting the scale, the mood, and the first impression across cinemas, hoardings, and every screen it lands on. This idea puts Google Gemini in charge of that moment. Not just shaping it, but defining it end to end. From building the core visual idea to crafting the final frame with the right drama, detail, and cinematic impact, Gemini creates a poster that feels ready for a big-screen reveal. And the twist is right there in plain sight, what looks like a traditional film poster is actually imagined and brought to life through Gemini.

We showcase this by revealing how the poster evolves with Gemini, from early directions to the final artwork. The end result rolls out like any major film launch across theatres, outdoor, and digital, but carries the twist within it, the way it was created changes how you see it.

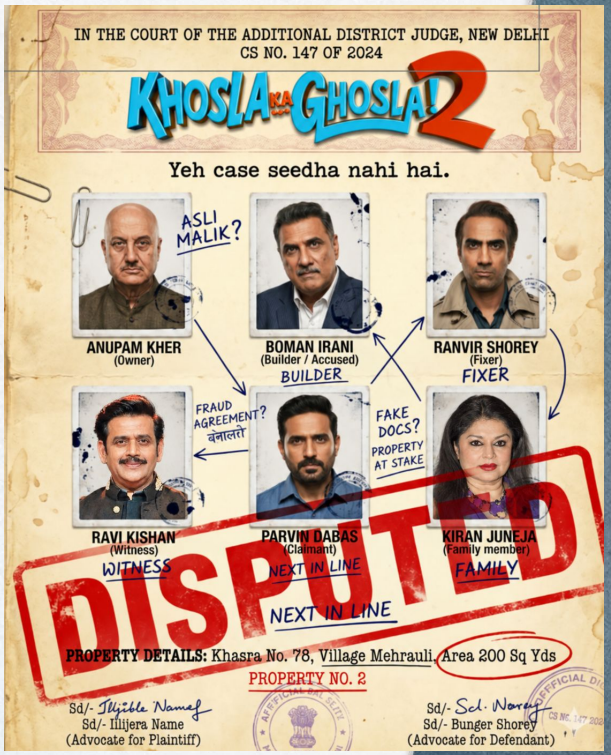

Extension: We can use these posters for billboards, metro hoardings, and Gemini-created movie posters. This could go extremely viral and create huge buzz, because no other movie has ever done its promotion directly through Google.

Ravi Kishan Touchpoints:

1. He is in his character from the movie, Gaya, playing a North Indian actor who is now pretending to be a Bandra guy, talking like Gemini, and people keep asking him how his English is suddenly so good, but he never reveals his secret that he learnt from gemini live.

2. During the KKG promotional tours, he goes around doing unexpected, whacky things with people, playing games, breaking into funky dance moves, getting strangers to sing Bhojpuri songs with him, and more. Before every interaction, he secretly asks Gemini what fun things he can get people to do, but never reveals his secret.

3. Ravi Kishan keeps talking about his best friend, “Gemmu,” saying, “Sab saath mein leke ghoomta hoon, mere Gemmu ko,” and “Mere Gemmu ko sab pata hai. I keep no secrets from him.” He keeps casually sharing movie gossip and everything else with Gemmu. Later, it is revealed that “Gemmu” is actually Gemini Live.

Sapno ka Plot ft. Gemini (collab with Anupam Kher)

Gemini Live

Concept: When something really matters to us, we obsess over every detail, imagining, reimagining, and perfecting it in our heads. Inspired by Anupam Kher's iconic character in Khosla Ka Ghosla, this reel brings his dream-plot obsession into today's world.

We see him standing on an empty plot, opening Google Gemini Live and simply showing it the space. From there, he starts talking: "Yahan parking ho sakti hai? Idhar bachchon ki trophies ka display? Garden kidhar banega?"

In real time, Gemini visualises each idea on the plot, layouts shifting, spaces transforming, possibilities unfolding instantly. His endless "sochna" now becomes interactive, dynamic, and surprisingly fun to watch.

And just when it feels like it's all imagination, there's a clear turn, the confusion starts settling, the ideas start aligning.

What was once all in his head is now right in front of him, smarter, faster, and

Frame mein Aa Jao

Nano Banana

Concept:
In Khosla Ka Ghosla, Cherry cutting himself out of the Khosla family photograph became an iconic, instantly recognisable moment, a small, quirky detail that people still remember.

This idea flips that moment on its head. Instead of being cut out, users can now put themselves in.

Using Google Gemini, people can recreate the same family photo by seamlessly integrating their own image into the frame, becoming a part of the Khosla family in a fun, shareable way.

We bring this alive through a carousel, each slide featuring different people "added" into the photo in seamless, surprising ways, sparking curiosity and inspiration. What looks like the same old frame suddenly changes with every swipe, new faces, new dynamics, a quiet little twist each time.

It then opens up to audiences to create and share their own versions. A nostalgic visual reimagined for today, turning a familiar moment into something playful, personal, and social-first.

Gemini

Make it Comical

Post-launch

Concept: Everyday problems often feel frustrating in the moment, but when you step back, they're almost comical. All it takes is a smarter lens to turn stress into something lighter.

Using Google Gemini, real-life frustrating situations are transformed into witty, shareable comic strips with a clever turn. What starts off as a typical headache, a broker ghosting, a deal falling through, a site visit gone wrong, suddenly flips into something unexpectedly funny or smartly resolved.

Much like Khosla Ka Ghosla, where tension and conflict don't just escalate but pivot through sharp thinking, each story here finds its own little breakthrough moment. The situation stays real, but the outcome takes a turn you didn't see coming. Gemini reimagines everyday problems into light-hearted comic narratives, making them feel less stressful and more entertaining, because sometimes the problem isn't the problem, it just needs a twist.

Tell us your funniest broker/property hunt story and we'll turn it into a comic. We collaborate with culture-forward pages like The Indian Idiot and Andheri West Shit Posting to amplify these stories, making them hyper-local, relatable, and highly shareable.

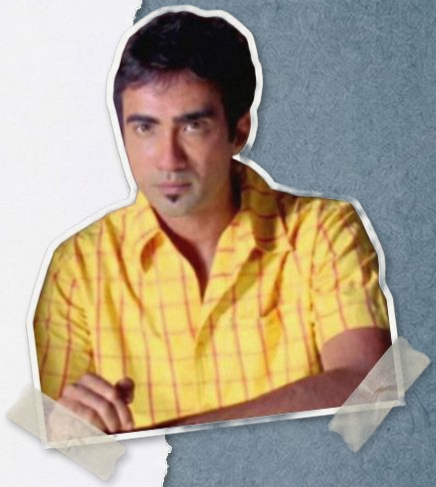

Gemini

Other Potential Touchpoints:

1. Iconic Wall - Yahan Peshaab Karna Mana Hai:
A random wall line became pop culture, proving how deeply the film seeped into everyday recall.
2. AI-Generated Posters & Fan Reimagination:
Audiences are already reimagining cinema through AI.
3. Anupam Kher × Boman Irani:
The emotional and comic core of the franchise still sits with them, making their return an instant attention trigger.
4. Regional Pages & Middle-Class Meme Culture
Hyperlocal pages and creators are already owning middle-class property humour, making them natural amplifiers for this world.

Gemini

Dikha Dunga

Launch Weekend

Concept:
A popular broker, Bhavish Kavare, presents a plot, but this isn't a typical pitch. Speaking as if he's addressing Mr. Khurana, he uses Google Gemini to bring the space to life, visualising a bungalow here, a building there, even a compound with Khurana's name on it.

He goes further, breaking down profits and interest in real time, turning numbers into something you can actually see and feel. It doesn't feel like a sales pitch. It feels like smart thinking in action.

And just when it seems like he's selling the land, the real shift reveals itself, he's not pitching a plot, he's flipping the entire perspective on how you evaluate one. What looked like a simple piece of land now feels like a fully realised opportunity.

It's exactly the kind of unexpected turn that would earn Khurana's attention, and even his approval. Because here, the real value isn't just in the plot. It's in the twist.

Gemini

Name Plate Obsession

Nano Banana

Concept:
In the world of Khosla Ka Ghosla, even something as simple as a name plate can become a full-blown obsession. This idea reimagines the iconic gold name plate through a meme carousel, where each slide upgrades it using Gemini.

Khosla, trying to play smart, sets out to fix one problem, his son isn't happy with the name plate. So he turns to Gemini to keep upgrading it, hoping one version finally gets his approval.

Marble ka bana diya. Wood ka bana diya. And then it keeps going: more creative, more bizarre, more over-the-top with every swipe, accompanied with Gemini prompts.

A fun, scrollable carousel, turning a small detail into a wildly entertaining series.

Gemini

Plot Pe Kabza

Canvas

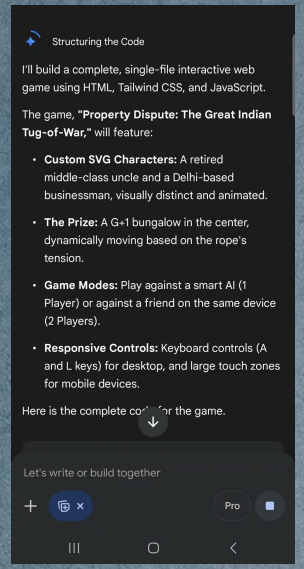

Concept:
What was once a full-blown family feud in Khosla Ka Ghosla now turns into a cute, chaotic game of build vs break.

Using Google Gemini, we recreate the iconic wall moment as a simple, playful game where two players constantly build and break each other's walls to claim the plot. One builds, the other instantly breaks, and the cycle keeps going in a funny, never-ending tug of war.

But here's where it shifts, what people remember as a tense, nostalgic moment now comes back as something interactive and unexpectedly fun. The same conflict, reimagined as a game, becomes a fresh twist on nostalgia itself.

We kick this off with creators, ideally two cinephiles or comedians, battling it out in a reel, dramatising the rivalry and showing how the game works in a fun, engaging way. Then, we open it up for audiences to jump in and play themselves.

With eye-catching visuals and light-hearted animations (similar to that of the characters), it becomes oddly satisfying (and hilarious) to watch the back-and-forth, turning a tense land grab into a fun, shareable game people can't stop playing (or watching).

Gemini

How Far will You Go?

Post-launch

Concept: Sometimes, making an impression goes way beyond logic, and that's where the humor kicks in. Inspired by Khosla Ka Ghosla, where Khurana uses Google Gemini to learn Malayalam to impress a lady officer, we turn this into a relatable meme carousel around the thought: "How far will I go to impress her?". We take more such instances from the movie, with Gemini enabling every step.

What starts off as simple effort quickly escalates into over-the-top attempts, each slide pushing it a little further, a little funnier. And somewhere in that escalation, the shift kicks in, the intent stays the same, but the approach takes a turn. The situation doesn't just get bigger, it gets smarter, funnier, and more self-aware. A humorous take on how far people stretch to make an impression, told through exaggerated, shareable moments, where every swipe adds a new layer and a new twist to the narrative.

Sample Carousel Prompts:
Vo Malayali hai → Gemini, "Nice to meet you" ko Malayalam mein kya bolte hain?
Usko poetry pasand hai → Gemini, help me practice my shayari
Usko cooking pasand hai → Gemini, easy but impressive recipe batao
Sample Audience Response:
Gemini + crush = dangerous combo
Why is this so accurate 😭
Where was Gemini when I was in my 20s😭
